Financial Assistance Resources

Rapidly rising health care costs, unforeseen occurrences in one's personal life, and increasing responsibilities can lead to the need for financial assistance. Financial needs for individuals with liver disease can vary from medication assistance to transportation assistance to transplant assistance.

The American Liver Foundation connects individuals with liver disease to the financial assistance resources they may need. This guide contains information about national organizations that either have financial assistance programs or connect patients to other resources so they can access affordable care.

The American Liver Foundation's mission is to facilitate, advocate, and promote education, support, and research for the prevention, treatment, and cure of liver disease.

NeedHelpPayingBills.com

Needhelppayingbills is an organization that provides people a place to get information on assistance programs. They have details on an extensive number of services, including phone numbers, addresses, and information on thousands of non-profit agencies, government and public assistance programs, and charity organizations. They also have information on financial services offered directly to consumers from private companies such as utility companies and credit counselors.

Program	Explore the countless programs listed on our site in order to get help in your time of need. Visit the following website for further information: http://www.needhelppayingbills.com/index.html
Eligibility	Most of the organizations and programs listed have limited funding. Many resources will also have qualifications that need to be met, or an application that may need to be completed. Unfortunately not everyone will be able to qualify for help. Since funding is limited, even if you do qualify for a program, there may not be any funds available. Also any financial assistance provided will tend to be only for a portion of your bills and expenses, as most non-profit agencies will only contribute partial funding.
